

Dalmatia

Well, who wouldn't want to spend time on the Dalmatian coast of Croatia? I took several hundred images between 1988 and 1999 and on the left is an image of Dubrovnik, which I took in 1993. The Yeshiva University Museum sent me to Dubrovnik to document Jewish sites, but I also photographed the rest of the city—in color.

With its long history of Venetian rule, one can still find ancient forts, like I did on the island of Hvar, on the left, middle. Below, we see boys in Dubrovnik's old town. Both photos were taken in 1988.
